

What Martin Luther King Jr would do if he was here today? He would tell the world not to look at skin color. Martin tried his best to show and tell the world to look at personality, not looks and color. African American's couldn't drink out of the same water fountain or ride the same bus as Caucasian. With Rosa parks she got on the bus knowing what she was doing i can prove that she was trying to prove her point. She didn't want get off the bus so then she got arrested. Well let's get on with it with all that's going on like with George Floyd and Breonna Taylor. I think Martin would try to stop all the riots and all the problems about it. I think he would try to stop it all with whatever he could because when you go back to the very beginning, he was doing what he was doing in the past to stop all this from happening. African American's couldn't drink out of the same water fountain or ride the same bus as Caucasian's. But then he passed from the bullet of James Earl Ray's gun. Martin was killed at the Lorraine Motel in Memphis, Tennessee, on April 4, 1968. James Ray was convicted in 1969 after entering as guilty plea. At the time of his death, he had served 29 years of his sentence. When Martin died, it was a very upsetting time. When he did pass, it was even sadder that a white man killed him for his freedom of speech. It's horrible how the world looks at skin more than the human's personality; more disrespectful than weird. It's what's on the inside not outside. Most of the riots should well most likely get worse before it gets better. Martin would have been a great president to this day better than Trump yet again in my opinion. Also, I loved how Martin fought for his right as a black man and for all blacks. Some may think that he was racist but i think he was not racist. He was fighting for a culture that at the time no one was fighting for and he had the right too. James thought he didn't have the right and well he thought that so much he killed him. In his speech "I" have a Dream", he said " Everybody can be great... Because anybody can serve. You don't have to have a college degree to serve. You don't have to make your subject and verb agree to serve. You only need a heart full of grace. A soul generated by love". That was exactly what he said and just because James was a white man and was racist does not mean all Caucasian's are like this. Those are my thoughts. Leave Martin Luther King Jr. in justice, humanity, and RIP.

Sincerely,
