

Main Street Monday!

How cool is this crosswalk! Matt Wallingford and the Maysville Main Street Board partnered with Mason County High School to paint a crosswalk in the Main Street District. The project has received some great appreciation from citizens in the community!

CONGRATULATIONS COVINGTON!!!! Renaissance Covington was selected by the National Main Street Center as "One to Watch"! The award was presented at the opening of our national conference last Monday! Unfortunately director, Katie Meyer had a scheduling conflict and was out of the country, but our whole contingency sported I Love Cov KY t-shirts in support of their community. Pictured below are Renaissance Covington board members Anne David, Cate Becker, Keith Lanser, Austin Dunbar and board chair Jim Guthrie.

Next week will feature a section of Conference information that we wanted to share with others!

Covington also presented at two of the educational sessions at the Conference. Middlesboro director, Isaac Kremer, also conducted a bootcamp that helped revitalize a downtown park site. More photos from the conference on page 3.

To celebrate May as National Preservation Month, Mayor Tony Young and Judge/Executive Eddie Rogers read a proclamation to members of the Campbellsville Main Street and Certified Local Government/Historic Preservation Commission on May 4th.

"This. Place. Matters." is a national preservation campaign that spotlights places that are meaningful to a community. The Campbellsville Civic Center, located on the southwest corner of Broadway and North Columbia Avenue is a Gothic Revival style building that was originally built in 1889 as the Campbellsville Baptist Church. The Cumberland Presbyterian Church bought it in 1916. An educational annex was added in 1955. The City of Campbellsville purchased the building and converted it into the Taylor County Public Library which opened in 1975. In 2013, the city renovated the building into offices, meeting spaces and City Council Chambers.

The Carrollton Main Street Program recently hosted a meeting of stake-holders in downtown Carrollton to evaluate the state of downtown. There were 30 people in attendance. They included elected city and county officials, downtown commercial property owners, business owners, and Carrollton Main Street Program Board members and Economic Restructuring Committee members. The group participated in a SWOT analysis activity to identify the strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats that they felt applied to downtown Carrollton. Carrollton Main Street Program president Jeff Moore was the facilitator for the meeting. Jeff is a trained SWOT Analysis facilitator and has used the exercise with both the local Rotary Club and with his employees at The News Democrat, our local paper.

Danville's past is worth preserving

Fifth grade, Toliver Elementary

Editor's note: This is the text of a speech given by Ramona Pierce at the Celebrate Preservation Event presented by Boyle Landmark Trust and Main Street Perryville at 3rd Street Methodist Church in Danville on May 12.Ramona is a fifth grade student at Edna L. Toliver Elementary; her speech was prepared as part of an educational project under the supervision of Mrs. Julie Rodes.

If you take a look around Danville, you will see plaques recognizing our history andoccasions that celebrate our history. The people of Danville have worked to recognize our history for a long time, and with great results. But who preserves our history? What prevents historical sites from deteriorating and being condemned? Why do we want to preserve historic buildings, and is saving them as beneficial as modernizing Danville?

To answer these questions, we need to understand the benefits of preserving our historic buildings. These structures strengthen Danville's economy by enhancing its appeal and attraction to residents and tourists alike. They give our city unique character and diversity. Savannah, Georgia, with its historic structure preservation program, is an example of how preserving history can improve a city. Progress in Savannah was begun by active volunteers, people who made time in their busy lives to volunteer for something they had passion for.

Danville is starting down the road of Savannah thanks to those who volunteer. It is a slow-moving process, though, and the question is whether we are doing enough to make up for the damage that has been done and continues of shops on Second Street. Our history, to be done despite the efforts of our preservation volunteers.

We cannot bring back historic sites and structures we have lost in Danville and Boyle County, but with more supporters we can make preservation a tradition that shows the heart of our town.

By coming here today, you are a preservation volunteer. Volunteers are the only people entitled to complain. You may have heard the saying, "Don't complain about it unless you are trying to do something about it," and those words ring true.

Many have complained about issues in Danville without doing anything about it, including myself. But through meeting so many incredible people like my teacher Mrs. Julie Rodes, Mrs. Barbara Hulette of the Boyle Landmark Trust, Mr. Daniel Carey of the Historic Savannah Foundation and Danville City Manager Ron Scott, I have learned that accurate complaints and willingness to work can help fix issues in our town. Volunteers are people who put their complaints to work.

But there is still the question of whether preserving buildings is better than tearing them down to modernize our city. Building a structure that is modern is not always bad, but often we are too quick to destroy our history in the name of convenience. It is sad to me that some people cheer when a modern building is built in the place of a run-down historic building that could have been renovated with the money it cost to build the new building. It is sad that we live in a place with so much rich history, but that many people do not realize that it is that history that gives Danville flavor and makes it attractive to tourists and sight-seers.

If you are educated about Danville's past, you can close your eyes and see people of previous generations ready to board a Greyhound bus outside the building that is now our beloved Burke's Bakery. You can see a milkman pushing his cart and counting his change, and see people coming in and out and people like you and me who value it, are what makes Danville unique.

We can continue to preserve our buildings, and we can get better at it.

Let's keep honoring the long history that distinguishes Danville. Let us come together as volunteers in support of keeping Danville's amazing historic beauty alive. Thank you for having me, and please celebrate preservation!

Friday is National Doughnut Day, stop in if you're in Danville for the Brass Band Festival stop in and enjoy a treat while envisioning people boarding a bus here in the past!

Vicki Birenberg and I had the pleasure of meeting this Ramona last fall. We watched her listen intently to the presenters and later question Daniel Carey in a one on one conversation. I have had the opportunity to know many a 5th grade student in my life, but none like Ramona. The future of preservation is bright with her as a leader. She is an amazing young

So much to do, so little time, fundraiser:) We know there are a lot of people in the community that would love to invest in their downtown and be involved, but with kids activities, work, other obligations, they simply just can't get to all the great events you plan. They may not know that they could just give to your program. This is a fun way to provide them an opportunity to support the Main Street program and downtown community without a lot of effort. This would be a great way to garner donations for a specific project.

The Main Street Alternative Fundraiser

This fundraiser is in lieu of having to run a 5K, come to or assist in an event, or leaving home for any reason.

Please support our community with your donation and help us achieve our goal or revitalizing our community! All funds raised will be reinvested in downtown

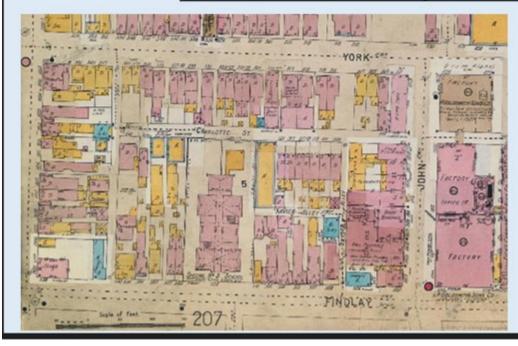

Thank you in advance for your support!!

1	_$20	I don't want to be in a chili cook-off, so here is the money I would have spent to go to the groand make a dish.
2	_$25	I do not want to ask my friends, family, or co-workers to attend an event, so here is my donation.
3	_$50	I do not want to run, walk, or swim in any activity. Here's the money so I don't have too and I don't need another t-shirt.
4	_$75	I don't want to attend any fancy events, so here is the money I would have spent on a new outfit.
5	_$10	I love downtown, but really don't have time to do anything extra, so here's $100 to help the cause.
$ even to en	t, run	I am making this donation to express my appreciation for not having to buy anything, attend an a 5K or any other distance, or get dressed up. I just want to help make my town great for all
